Dear Chris,

A letter of advice

Thank you for your letter and I am sorry to hear about your problems. Let me give you some suggestions.

First, you said that you don't have any privacy in your very small flat. If I were you, I would use different ways to contact my friends. For instance, send a message or e-mail or chat with them. Moreover, you can phone your friends outside the flat. Therefore, it is not a problem of having no privacy.

Second, you told me that you can't study easily in the flat because it is crowded and noisy. I think you should study at school or go to the study room in the library. A quiet place is provided for you and you can find a lot of information while you are studying there. As a result, you can do your homework earlier and at school, too.

At the end, you said that you want to go out with your friends and drop out of school to find a full-time job because you haven't got enough money. In my opinion, it's a great suggestion to solve the problem by finding a job but I don't think dropping out of school for a full-time job is good idea. As study in school is fun, you can make friends and learn more from school. It also affects your future. If you can study well in school, you will have a stable work after you finish your study. To relax with your friends, you and your friends can do some meaningful or free of charge activities.

I hope my advice can help you to solve your problem. Please write back.

Yours sincerely,
Nicky
