What should class debates be about – school issues or workplace issues?

As we are students, we should know more about the issues in our school. Therefore, I think the class debate should be about the school issues.

Firstly, the class debate about school issues can enhance our awareness of the things happening around us. However, class debate about workplace issues is too far away from our real life. As a result, class debate about school issues can provide more opportunities for us to practice our mode of thinking, and it also serves as a reflection on our behavior in school.

Secondly, another reason behind why class debate should be about school issues is that it would enhance the relationship between classmates. We could try to express our opinions and try to accept the different ideas from the others about the same debating issues. Therefore, class debate about school issues can establish a better relationship between classmates.

Moreover, the other advantage of class debate about school issues is that it could provide an opportunity for us to know more about the matters in the school. For example, we can learn the thing more objectively and be critical through solving the conflicts and problems during the class debate. Therefore, class debate about school issues can broaden our knowledge and develop our critical mind. All in all, I strongly believe that class debate should be about school issues based on the advantages they bring to us.
